Couldn't either party have denied that they had sex?

I wonder what will be going through the mind of the girl by now IF indeed there was consensual sex and that it was the boyfriend and uncle who pushed her to make the rape allegation.

Okay!! So I finally get to watch the infamous video KKD and his lawyer has been talking about and I think they shouldn't have even mentioned it. It actually complicates his case than exonerate him. The part they placed emphasis on was where the girl kissed him and so they term that as consent is even worse.

In the video, KKD was seen forcibly pulling the girl to the side and from there we didn't see what really ensued, whether the girl resisted or not, it wasn't clear. We did see some action going on but it could be anything from struggle to kiss. If it had been another country, that alone would have been termed as an assault.

This video is not not...he shouldn't even mention it again, it complicates him the more.
